BROADWAY THEATER.

The Man Without a Country.

This play is not, as one might suppose, founded on the unhappy career of the traitor Benedict Arnold, but is a story of the south in the most interest-ing epoch of her history—the period just after the Civil war, when she was torn with contention, her fields and fre-sides exacted by a concepting for One sides ravaged by a conquering fee. One an see at a glance the splendid chance for the dramatist. "Grim-visaged war sides ravaged by a conquering foe. One can see at a giance the splendid chance for the dramatist. "Grim-visaged war hath smoothed his wrinkled front," but left in his trail many a heartache, many a blasted hope, many a vacant chair. This is the theme of this great play presented by the Bennett-Moulton company. It is a play that every loval American should see, for it brings home to us, as no history can, the misery caused by the great fratricidal war and reunites us, as no other agency can, with our brothers of the south.

WHICH MEANS DEATH

How many readers have heard of this terrible disease? It prevails in that far-away country-Africa-especially the Congo district. It is caused by the bite of the tsetse fly. When it bites a person, the sleeping symptoms begin and finally the sufferer sleeps until death occurs.

MONTEREY.

Now here, now there, the shot, it hailed In deadly drifts of flery spray. Yet not a single soldier qualled When wounded comrades round them walled Their dying shout at Monterey.

And on-still on our column kept Through walls of flames its withering Way, Where fell the dead, the living stept, Still charging on the guns which swept The allphery streets of Monterey.

The foe himself recoiled aghast,
When, striking where he atrongest
lay.
We swooped his flanking batteries past
And braving full their murderous blast,
Stormed home the Lewers of Monterey.

Our banners on those turrets wave, And there our evening bugles play. Where orange boughs, above their grave Keep green the memory of the brave Who fought and fell at Monterey.

We are not many, we who pressed
Beside the brave who fell that day;
But who of us has not confessed
He'd rather share their warrier rest.
Than not have been at Monterey?
—Charles Fenno Hoffman.
